PLANS FOR NEW POOL ON TRACK

CONSTRUCTION TO BEGIN IN AUG., SWIMMING TO BEGIN IN 2013

MARLA TONCRAY
marla.toncray@lee.net

City officials learned Thursday that plans for a new swimming pool at the Maysville-Mason County Recreation Park are on schedule.

Discussion about a newly design pooled focused on the need to apply for construction funding through a Land, Water and Conservation grant, as well as solicitation of local businesses for donations.

While the grant is one source of funding, if awarded, the amount would be less than half of the projected budget of $290,000, or $120,000.

City Manager Ray Young said plans also include sending a letter to local businesses asking for corporate donations to offset costs.

The original pool was 40 years old and had major repair and leak issues in recent years.

Demolition of the pool was authorized in February and has been completed.

City Engineer Sam Baker said the next phase of the project is to fill in the hole and to award a construction contract, which should occur at the May Board of Commissioners meeting.

Construction of the new pool should begin in August, and will mean the public will have a new pool for the 2013 summer season.

Maysville police Sgt. Kelly Prater confers with officer Justin Merrill during an investigation Thursday of break-ins along East Second Street.

starting on April 11, he said.

Mikal Thackston, 18, of Maysville, was charged with three counts of second-degree burglary and taken to Mason County Detention Center.

The juvenile was transported to Campbell County Juvenile Detention and was charged with three counts of second-degree burglary, Horch said.

Additional charges are expected to be filed on these individuals as the investigation unfolds, police said.

This case is currently under investigation by Officer Justin Merrill and Detective Ken Fuller of the Maysville Police Department, Horch said.

Many of the incidents were in the 400 block of East Second Street, police said.

Some victims declined to have police file reports, but notified MPD of the incidents anyway.

FLEMINGSBURG | It took less than two minutes for Fleming County School Superintendent Tony Roth to make his future plans clear to those attending the Fleming County School Board meeting on Wednesday night.

Roth has been under contract and potential negotiations were broken off at the last board meeting.

Following the bulk of the agenda, the board went into executive session at 7:55 p.m., with the board and Roth remaining in the meeting room and the audience of nearly 100 spectators told to leave the room.

Senate passes ambitious road construction plan

MEASURE NOW GOES TO HOUSE

ROGER ALFORD
Associated Press

FRANKFORT | The Senate approved an ambitious road construction plan Thursday afternoon, and it was expected to receive final passage from the House within hours.

Lawmakers moved quickly on the final day of this year's legislative session to pass the plan that includes $3.5 billion worth of construction projects over the next two years and more than $10 billion worth over the next six years.

Senate Transportation Committee Chairman Ernie Harris, R-Crestwood, said the proposal includes funding for the state's single largest project: $2.6 billion for two bridges across the Ohio River in Louisville. Harris said the Democratic-controlled House and the Republican-led Senate agreed that project is a top priority.

Baker said architect Matt Thiess is working with his office to provide renderings of the new design, which should be ready by May.

In other business, commissioners:

- Approved several items from the Cox building as surplus. The items include the cooler of the soda fountain in the former Kilgus Drug Store, kitchen cabinets, light fixtures. The surplus sale is scheduled for later this month.
- Approved the appointment of Wayne Muse as Mason County Emergency Management Director and David Hord as Emergency Management applicant agent.

- Approved a revised pay scale for the position of assistant city engineer, a position Hord was hired into last month.

- Accepted the city audit for fiscal year ending June 30, 2011. Details of the audit were not discussed at the meeting, however, City Controller Romie Griffey said the city still has a surplus in the city's reserve fund.

- Hired Angela Garrett as dispatcher at the 911 Emergency Center.

- Approved a letter of support for the 2012 Maysville-Mason County Chapter of the NAACP Gala.

- Agreed to sign a contract for natural gas with Kentucky United Energy.

JetBlue pilot indicted for flight disruption

BETSY BLANEY

Associated Press

LUBBOCK, Texas | A JetBlue Airways captain accused of disrupting a Las Vegas-bound flight when he left the cockpit screaming about religion and terrorists has been indicted, according to court documents posted Thursday.

A grand jury in Lubbock indicted Clayton F. Osborn on one count of interference of a flight crew — the same charge he's been held on since shortly after the March 27 incident.

Osborn's attorney, Dean Roper, declined to comment, the attorney's secretary said Thursday.

Witnesses on Flight 191 say Osborn ran through the cabin yelling about Jesus and al-Qaida. The first officer locked him out of the cockpit and passengers wrestled the captain to the floor. They restrained him with seat belt extenders and zip tie handcuffs while the first officer diverted the flight to land in Amarillo.

Osborn is undergoing a court-ordered psychiatric exam to determine whether he was legally sane and can stand trial.

Under federal law, a conviction for interfering with a flight crew can bring up to 20 years in prison. The offense is defined as assaulting or intimidating the crew, interfering with its duties or diminishing its ability to operate the plane.

Investigators say Osborn told his co-pilot, "things just don't matter," and rambled incoherently about religion shortly after the flight departed from New York. His behavior became more erratic as the flight wore on, prosecutors say, and ended with the tense struggle in the cabin.

Passengers said the pilot seemed disoriented, jittery and constantly sipped water when he first stormed from the cockpit and marched through the cabin. Then, they said, he began to rant about threats linked to Iran, Iraq and Afghanistan after crew members tried to calm him down at the back of the plane.

The prosecution motion that sought the psychiatric exam said the events of that day "establish a likelihood that Osborn may be suffering from a mental disease or defect."

A flight attendant's ribs were bruised while trying to restrain Osborn, but no one on board was seriously hurt.

dence within the last 72 hours and has not reported the theft, they should contact MPD so property can be returned to the proper owners.

ROTH

FROM A1

Most of the crowd remained in the hallway and staircases of the Central Office building for an hour until the doors were reopened.

After reconvening the meeting, the public was asked for comments, with Roth announcing he had something to say.

He thanked the audience for coming and staying.

"I'm not happy with this job and I'm not coming back next year," Roth said. He asked the board to not bother with a vote, as listed on the agenda.

Roth explained 14 years ago he had intended to stay four years and win some ball games then move on, but ended up staying as a member of the Fleming County School District, eventually becoming interim superintendent before being offered the position two years ago.

He cited deficiencies in the district which predated his employment as superintendent for the last year and a propensity for the problems to continue due to a lack of cooperation between agencies.

According to an evaluation done through Kentucky Department of Education because FCS had been labeled a Persistently Low Achieving district, transparency, respect, collaboration, expectations, standards and leadership problems exist in the district at the school board, district, and school leadership levels.

At the last meeting, the board attempted to declare its intent not to negotiate with Roth on extending his contract but rescinded a 4-1 vote against him, after hours of public outcry at the meeting.

Roth makes the second in a leadership role in the district to take a hit after the evaluation was completed.

Fleming County High School Principal Rob Bowers was removed from his post by KDE last month, officials said. Bowers was removed as principal, though he is still employed in the district, and Jessie Bacon was placed in the position as interim principal, officials said.

Roth encouraged those in attendance to continue to strive for progress and cooperation. He is remaining on the job until the end of his contract.

The meeting was adjourned after a motion was approved to drop the vote from the agenda.

Budgeting has been one of the more time-consuming chores this year for Kentucky lawmakers, who last month passed a $19 billion state government operating budget.

A slow economic rebound led to a lean state budget that forces sharp cuts on most government agencies, leaves employees without pay raises again and erases a planned cost-of-living increase from the monthly pension checks of retirees.

The measure calls for 8.4 percent cuts to most government agencies and programs because of lingering financial woes brought on by the recession.

Those cuts will account for nearly $300 million in savings.

The latest budget will be especially difficult for agencies that have already cut spending by more than 30 percent over the past four years.

Democratic Gov. Steve

Beshear used his line-item veto power Wednesday to strike some provisions lawmakers had tucked into the budget, including $200,000 for an actors' guild, $300,000 for a mystery writers' festival and a handful of other earmarks.

Lawmakers scraped up funding for some high-priority projects, including $2.5 million to begin design work on a proposed renovation of Rupp Arena, home of the University of Kentucky basketball team.

They also agreed to pony up $3.5 million for improvements at the Kentucky Horse Park north of Lexington.

Lawmakers also passed Beshear's tax amnesty plan that he believes could collect a badly needed $55 million over the next two years.

It would be the state's first offer of tax amnesty in a decade, and would forgive some penalties if people come forward and pay their taxes.

GEORGETOWN, Ohio | A Brown County man pleaded guilty Monday to manufacturing methamphetamine while near a child, according to Brown County Court of Common Pleas reports.

Raydean Gulley, 42, of Hamersville, was sentenced by Judge

Scott Gusweiler for a 4-year term in prison, three of those years to be mandatory, according to court reports.

The manufacture of drugs, within 100 feet of a juvenile is a first-degree felony, which may be punishable up to a maximum of 11 years in prison, according to Ohio criminal sentencing guidelines.

Gulley also forfeited a 350CC all-terrain vehicle and a Honda generator which was instrumental in the commission of the felony, according to court reports.

He was arrested Dec. 16 for the illegal manufacture of drug charge, according to the Brown County Sheriff.

NASHVILLE POLICE: ONE MAN, NINE HOURS, 12 CHARGES

NASHVILLE, Tenn. | A fugitive from Kentucky who rode to Nashville on a bus broke into a haunted house tourist attraction, carjacked a taxi, robbed some hotel guests and committed other crimes during the bus lay-over, police say.

The suspect, 24-year-old William Todd, remained in jail Thursday and awaits trial on charges including nine felony counts. Todd was only supposed to be passing through Nashville and was in the city only nine hours, police said.

Todd is charged with felony counts of aggravated assault, aggravated robbery, burglary and being a fugitive from justice. Jail records don't indicate if he has a lawyer.

Authorities said Todd was wanted in Kentucky, but Nashville jail records didn't provide details. — AP WYMT-TV in Hazard reported the fire occurred late Tuesday night.

Prestonsburg firefighter Michael Tussey said fire units arrived to find a trailer engulfed in flames, a couple of cars burning and the fire spreading to a second home.

Fire Chief Bobby Carpenter said firefighters found a body in the area where the bathroom had been and believe the victim was the woman who lived there. Her name wasn't released.

Carpenter said when water from a fire hose hit magnesium wheels on a burning car, there was an explosion that sent two firefighters to Highlands Regional Medical Center with minor injuries. They were released after treatment. — AP

Upon a motion by the Brown County Prosecutor's Office, the felony count of engaging in a pattern of corrupt activity was dismissed, according to Common Pleas Court reports.

Once he is released, Gulley's driver's license will be suspended for one year, and he must pay court cost and public defender's fees.

Gusweiler also ordered a mandatory post-release control program for five years.

Raydean's past record includes charges on Aug. 1, 2008 for receiving stolen property, a fifth-degree felony, and additional charge for violating his probation on Jan. 29, 2010, according to the sheriff's records.

PROJECT

FROM A3

An ancient boiler, which required shoveling coal, has also been removed and will be replaced with a geothermal heating system.

During the meeting, the board approved several change orders, including a roadway connection change, cast stone veneer supplier change, water line and unsuitable soils adjustments to the cost of the expansion.

At the new Ewing Elementary School site loss of a concrete contractor was explained by Craig Aossey, of Gary Scott and Associates architecture firm overseeing the project.

According to Aossey, the concrete contractor was over-extended and had a project conflict so he would not be able to complete the obligation at Ewing. He asked to be let out of the project, but another firm had approval necessary to take over.

The board approved changing from Neil Concrete to Hubbard Contracting for the Ewing project.

Neil will complete work at the Hillsboro site, officials said.

The change would be at no additional cost, Aossey said.

According to Aossey, the Hillsboro project is about on schedule, but Ewing is 30-50 days behind, in part due to unsuitable soil issues that had to be mitigated with removing what he called fatty clay which would expand or dry too much, and replace it with crushed stone.

"That is the most effective solution," Aossey said.

All three projects are being partially funded through special nickel tax authorized by the 2011 Kentucky General Assembly.

McConnell visits Ky. plant he helped keep open

TOURS GARMENT FACTORY ONCE AT RISK OF LOSING WORK TO PRISONERS

BRUCE SCHREINER
Associated Press

OLIVE HILL | U.S. Senate Republican Leader Mitch McConnell took a victory lap Thursday through a Kentucky garment factory he helped protect when the producer of Air Force jackets was threatened with losing work to prisoners.

McConnell chatted with workers over the whirl of sewing machines, telling them he was glad their jobs were preserved, as he toured the Ashland Sales and Service plant in an area dogged by double-digit unemployment.

Company President Michael Mansh said the senator's intervention was instrumental in getting Federal Prison Industries to back off pursuing a contract to make the Air Force jackets. That work has helped sustain the small plant at Olive Hill since the late 1990s.

"The odds were that if they had taken it, we were doomed immediately," Mansh said in an interview.

The plant employs about 100 people. The average wage is about $9 per hour.

The dark-blue jackets churned out by the factory are issued to every member of the Air Force, enlistees and officers, and are sometimes worn by U.S. presidents. The plant also makes Army combat coats.

Workers said anxiety rose as Federal Prison Industries considered entering the competition for the contract.

"I'm glad they stepped down," said employee Martha Day.

Another worker, Paulette Lowe, said she would have resented losing work to prisoners.

"I think they need to find them something else to do. We're trying to work making a living in an honest way," she said.

Finding new work would have been challenging, she said. Olive Hill is in Carter County, where the unemployment rate was 12.4 percent in February, down from 12.8 percent the previous month. In February 2011, the county's jobless rate was 14.9 percent.

The northeastern Kentucky factory wasn't alone in stressing over the prospect of losing work to prisoners.

A Campbellsville factory learned recently that Federal Prison Industries wouldn't bid on the contract it holds to make T-shirts for U.S. soldiers. McConnell, the state's senior senator, had also interceded on behalf of Campbellsville Apparel Co.

McConnell said Thursday that turning work over to prisoners would have destroyed private-sector jobs.

"What happened here in Olive Hill is an example of how the government is getting in the way, making it harder for the private sector to do what it does, which is to grow and hire people and produce products for our folks," McConnell told reporters.

McConnell has introduced legislation that would require the director of the Bureau of Prisons to be appointed by the president with the consent of the Senate. The bill came after the senator interceded on behalf of the Kentucky garment makers.

McConnell blamed government overregulation for slowing the nation's recovery from a deep economic downturn.

"This is the slowest recovery after a deep recession in American history, and the government itself is making it difficult for the economy to rebound," he said.

Meanwhile, Ashland Sales and Service is hoping to win the next contract to produce the Air Force jackets; bids were due earlier this week. The company has put in bids to produce other apparel products for the Pentagon, Mansh said. Whether that increases the work force at the Olive Hill plant will depend on which contracts it lands and the military's demand for the products, he said.

Group plans to fly Confederate flag near Paducah

Associated Press

PADUCAH | A Confederate history organization has put up a flagpole in western Kentucky near Interstate 24 and plans to fly a large battle flag.

The pole is on private land in Reidland at exit 16.

The Paducah Sun reported Kentucky division commander John Suttles of the Sons of Confederate Veterans said the land for a memorial park was donated by a man who had Confederate ancestors.

Suttles said the park will contain, besides the flagpole, benches and a circle of bricks to represent fallen Confederate soldiers.

"We are doing this to honor ancestors," Suttles said. "It's the 150th anniversary of the war for Southern independence. People may have mixed feelings about this, but it is historic."

McCracken County Judge-Executive Van Newberry said that doesn't mean people seeing it won't form opinions about Paducah.

"There are people that view that flag with disdain," Newberry said. "It's going to be seen by travelers, and we don't need that. That's unfortunate."

But he said as long as the group follows county code as they are putting it up, it is protected by the First Amendment.

Sons of Confederate Veterans national executive director Ben Sewell said there are similar flags set up in places all over the South, including along Interstate 65 in Alabama. He said the idea is to put them in high-visibility spots.

"The flag was created to distinguish Confederate soldiers in the war," Sewell said. "Quite frankly, that is all it has ever stood for. It's other people who have put that stigma on it. It is a historical war flag."

A similar memorial was built in 1998 on private land bordering Interstate 65 at the southern edge of Nashville, Tenn.

ATTACK

The grand jury charged the men with violating a hate crime law that was expanded in 2009 to cover assaults motivated by bias against gays, lesbians and transgender people. They also were indicted on federal kidnapping, assault and conspiracy charges.

"The indictment marks the first federal case in the nation charging a violation of the sexual orientation section of the Federal Hate Crimes Law," said a U.S. Department of Justice statement.

"It's vindicating to see that the years of hard work that went into making sure this law was on the books is now being put into place," said Michael Cole-Schwartz, a spokesman for the Washington-based Human Rights Campaign, which pushed for the law's passage.

"The law was really meant as a backstop so that the resources of the federal government could be brought to bear when necessary to deal with these kinds of crimes," Cole-Schwartz said.

David and Anthony

Jenkins pleaded not guilty to the charges in federal court in London on Thursday. David Jenkins' lawyer, Andrew Stephens of Lexington, said Jenkins knew Pennington and Jenkins denies that he committed a hate crime.

"The hate crime component of this is just flat wrong," Stephens said. "I think it's very difficult to get into the mind of somebody and figure out what their intent is."

Pennington also suffered injuries to his back, face, neck and ear in the attack at Kingdom Come State Park, a mountaintop park covering more than 1,200 acres of pristine pine-covered wilderness in the mountainous Appalachian region. He was subsequently treated and released from a hospital.

An FBI affidavit said Pennington went for a ride with the two men and two other women, but asked to be taken home after a few minutes. Pennington told investigators that David Jenkins demanded a sexual favor from Pennington, which was refused. Then the man said David Jenkins threatened to violently rape him, according to the affidavit.

The truck stopped in the park because a tree had fallen across the road and Anthony and David Jenkins pulled Pennington out of the truck and attacked him. The women in the truck, Alexis Leann Combs Jenkins and Mable Ashley Jenkins, have been charged with kidnapping and aiding a kidnapping, authorities said.

The men pulled Pennington out of their truck, hit him and kicked him while "making anti-homosexual statements," according to tge FBI affidavit.

"During the attack (the victim) was covering his face and they were all screaming 'how do you like this faggot?'" the affidavit said.

Kerry Harvey, U.S. Attorney for Kentucky's Eastern District, said Thursday that a possible conviction on the hate crime charge could send the two men to prison for life. He said the men used a truck and traveled on a federal highway with the victim, which allowed the case to fall under federal jurisdiction.

The Kentucky Equality Federation, a civil rights group, pushed to have the four charged under a 2009 federal hate crimes law. The bill is known as the Matthew Shepard-James Byrd Jr. Hate Crimes Prevention Act. Shepard was a gay college student killed in Wyoming in 1998.

ACCIDENT

FROM A3

Haney said there were no witnesses to the tractor accident.

After surveying the land near the tractor during a preliminary investigation, Haney said it seems the Ford 3000 tractor's back tire slipped or the ground might have given away from beneath it. Then, because of the weight of the tractor and the additional weight of the loader attached to the front, the tractor overturn, he said. It looked like Franklin was driving near a ditch, Haney said.

Sheriff Dwayne Weninger said he urges all citizens to use more caution during this agriculture and mowing season.

Additionally do not drive around sides of hills with a tractor and every tractor needs roll bar protection. Citizens should drive up and down low hills, but do not drive down hills that are too steep to be safe. Also, everyone should read the operator guidelines for driving a tractor, Haney said.

Beloved Cuban bishop Agustin Roman dies in Miami

FIRST CUBAN APPOINTED BISHOP IN U.S. WORKED WITH IMMIGRANTS

MIAMI | Agustin Roman, the first Cuban to be appointed bishop in the United States, has died in Miami. He was 83.

The Archdiocese of Miami announced Roman went into cardiac arrest and died Wednesday evening. He had suffered from heart disease for several years.

Archbishop Thomas Wenski called Roman a "great patriot" to the Cuban nation.

Officials say Roman and 132 other priests were expelled from Cuba in 1961. He arrived in Miami, where he became a spiritual leader and advocate first for Cuban exiles and later for many other immigrants, including Haitian refugees. He also worked closely with protestant and Jewish leaders.

"The Archdiocese of Miami has lost a great evangelizer who tirelessly preached the Gospel to all. And the Cuban nation has lost a great patriot," Wenski said in a statement.

Roman served as a mediator during the 1980 Mariel boatlift, when Castro allowed more than 100,000 Cubans to flee by sea to the U.S. He also helped negotiate a peaceful end to a 1986 riot of Cuban detainees at federal prisons in Georgia and Louisiana. He later sought to convince Cuban-Americans to support asylum for Haitian refugees.

"The passing of Monsignor Roman is not just a loss for the Catholic faithful in South Florida but for all in our community who have fled oppressive regimes or have sought refuge and comfort in the words and support of this gentle man," said U.S. Rep. Ileana Ros-Lehtinen, R-Miami. "He was an advocate for God, for fundamental freedoms, and for those whom society had sometimes forgotten."

During his early years in Miami, he urged exiles to donate what little they could afford to build the Shrine of Our Lady of Charity on Biscayne Bay. It became a beacon for exiles and to this day attracts hundreds of thousands of visitors each year and remains a gathering point for many Cuban-Americans during moments of political crisis.

The shrine holds a replica of a statue of Cuba's patron saint, the Virgin of Charity of Cobre. This year marks 400 years since she first appeared in old copper mining town on the southeastern coast of Cuba.

After being expelled from Cuba, Roman first went to Spain then Chile before eventually arriving in Miami. He retired as auxiliary bishop of Miami when he turned 75 on May 5, 2003, as required under canon law. He remained active at the Shrine, where he was often found greeting visitors and responding to letters from fellow Cuban exiles. It was there that he suffered the heart attack.

There will be a public viewing at the Shrine of Our Lady of Charity all day Friday. Wenski will lead a funeral Mass at the Cathedral of St. Mary at 1 p.m. Saturday, followed by an interment at Our Lady of Mercy Cemetery.

Algeria's first president dies at 96

WAS CHARISMATIC INDEPENDENCE LEADER

AOMAR OUALI
Associated Press

ALGIERS, Algeria | Algeria's first president and one of six historic leaders of the bloody independence struggle from France passed away in his family home in the capital Algiers at the age of 96, his family members told the state news agency Wednesday.

The report did not give a cause for death, but twice in the last month he had been admitted to the military hospital of Ain Naadja in the past month complaining of discomfort.

The charismatic Ben Bella, a symbol of pan-Arabist ideology as well as the global anti-colonial movement, was president of Algeria from 1963 until he was overthrown in a military coup in 1965 by the army chief of staff, Col. Houari Boumedienne.

Ben Bella was under house arrest until 1980, and he went into self exile in Switzerland until returning to the country in 1990.

A giant of Algeria's independence struggle and first few years, he played only a symbolic role in the latter years of his life, heading the opposition Movement for the Democracy in Algeria Party, which competed in the aborted 1991 elections, winning just 2 percent of the vote.

His party was banned in 1997 but he continued to live in Algeria, often condemning government policies. He was present when current president Abdelaziz Bouteflika was sworn in for his third term in April 2009.

Aside from Bouteflika, he was the country's sole civilian leader and was followed by a string of generals.

One of the six "historic leaders" of Algeria's revolt against French colonial rule, Ben Bella spent 23 years of his life in French and Algerian prisons.

Through most of the eight-year war of independence, Ben Bella was held in a French fortress. His liberation was one of the main Algerian demands in the drawn-out peace talks that led to the 1962 Evian agreements for Algeria's independence.

Elected president of the newly-independent nation virtually without opposition, he enjoyed less than three years of an extravagant and erratic leadership before being overthrown in an army coup and imprisoned by Boumedienne, then army chief of staff.

Until Boumedienne's death 13 years later, Ben Bella became a "non person" in Algeria. No public mention of his name was allowed in Algerian media — all state-controlled. Even the official attacks on Ben Bella's allegedly "arbitrary and wasteful" regime avoided mentioning his name.

Boumedienne died in 1978. His pragmatic and moderate successor, Chadli Bendjedid, freed Ben Bella from more than a decade of detention without trial, ultimately allowing him to go abroad with his wife Zora and their two adopted daughters.

It was Ben Bella's misfortune that he was very much a product of the colonial regime that France imposed on Algeria for 130 years. He spoke better French than Arabic, and the Arabic he spoke was colloquial rather than literary.

As a result, he had difficulty conversing with the leaders of other Arab nations. His often rousing and emotion-charged speeches as president were delivered in Algerian Arabic — which few citizens of other Arab nations fully understand — and when he wanted to stress a particular argument, he broke into French.

Ben Bella was born on Christmas Day, 1916, to a peasant family in Marnia, on Algeria's border with Morocco.

He joined the French army in his late teens, rising to the rank of senior warrant officer.

He fought with distinction with the Free French Forces in Italy during World War II and won five French decorations including the prestigious Military Medal. But returning home following the allied victory in Europe, he quickly found that a war hero of Muslim origin had little future in an Algeria ruled by French settlers.

Flemingsburg Chamber learn and lunch session April 26

The public is invited to attend the Fleming County Chamber of Commerce Learn at Lunch event “Compliance with the Fair Labor Standards Act: Wages and Hours Worked” presented by Karen Garnett, district director: U.S. Department of Labor, Wage and Hour Division. This Learn at Lunch session will take place on Thursday, April 26, 2012, starting at 11:30 a.m. at Flemingsburg Baptist Church. Food will be prepared by the FCHS culinary students and the cost to attend is $10 per person, which includes both the workshop and lunch. Karen Garnett has been with the Wage and Hour Division for 23 years. She was a wage and hour compliance specialist for 19 years in which she conducted numerous investigations under the Fair Labor Standards Act, Davis-Bacon and Related Acts, Service Contract Act and Family and Medical Leave Act; applying the full range compliance techniques to resolve a wide variety of minimum wage, overtime, child labor, coverage, exemption, employment eligibility and other compliance issues in agricultural, commercial, construction, industrial, and other business establishments. In addition, she has served as an instructor for Basic I Training, Family and Medical Leave Act, and H1B. Ms. Garnett is a recipient of the Secretary’s Exceptional Achievement Award (April 2003), which was awarded, in recognition of outstanding achievement in a significant nationwide investigation that resulted in payment of $1.1 million to over 3000 low wage employees of a company with a long history of non-compliance. For more information about this event, or to sign up to attend, please call the Fleming County Chamber of Commerce office at 606-845-1223 by no later than April 20. You can also reach us by email at crystal@flemmingskychamber.com. We’d like to invite Chamber members to set up displays or pass out literature at this event in order to share information with other members of the community about their business. If you’d like to set up a display, please contact us at the above number or email to reserve your spot by no later than April 20.

STOCKS SURGE; HEWLETT-PACKARD LEADS DOW HIGHER

NEW YORK | A collection of encouraging news on the global economy drove stocks higher for the second day in a row. China, the world’s second-largest economy, showed signs of strength. U.S. exports rose to an all-time high as U.S. businesses sold more goods abroad. And a successful sale of Italian government bonds helped investors put aside fears of a deeper European debt crisis — at least for a day.

“European governments have a mountain of debt coming due early this year,” said John Canally, investment strategist at LPL Financial in Boston. “Some of what you’re seeing today in markets is a bit of relief that they’re working through it.”

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 146 points to 12,951, as of 12:30 p.m. Thursday. That’s a gain of 1.1 percent.

Hewlett-Packard rose 6 percent, leading the Dow, after a study found that shipments of personal computers unexpectedly rose at the start of the year.

Gartner Inc. found that Hewlett-Packard bolstered its position as the leader in PC shipments, claiming 17 percent of the world’s total during the first three months of the year. The research group said total PC shipments increased 1.9 percent in the quarter.

In other trading, the Standard & Poor’s 500 index rose 14 points, or 1.1 percent, to 1,383. The Nasdaq composite index gained 35 points to 3,051, or 1.1 percent.

Material companies rose 2.4 percent, the most of the 10 sectors in the S&P 500. Energy and industrial stocks were close behind, up nearly 2 percent. There was encouraging news for investors from various parts of the world Thursday:

• China’s central bank reported a surprising jump in new loans. The loan figures for March eased concerns that China’s economic growth would come to a sudden halt.

• Italy’s long-term borrowing rates fell after the country easily sold $6.4 billion in new government debt. Major European stock indexes turned higher; Germany’s DAX and France’s CAC 40 each rose 1 percent.

Computer classes offered by Southern Hills Adult Education Department

Southern Hills Adult Education Department offers an array of computer classes throughout the school year.

Whether you want to learn more about Microsoft Word, Excel, Access, PowerPoint or Publisher, there is a class for you. Brush up on your computer skills by taking a class close to home!

An Introduction to Computers class begins Tuesday, April 17. Class will meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 6 – 9 p.m. for three weeks. Introduction to Computers is an overview course for those with little or no computer experience.

This is a hands-on course with many opportunities for participation.

A Microsoft Word class will start Monday, April 16. Class will be held on Mondays and Wednesdays from 6-9 p.m. for three weeks.

In this course, students will learn how to format documents, create tables, and manage documents. All computer classes are held at the Southern Hills Career Center, 9193 Hamer Road, Georgetown. For more information or registration for any class, please call Southern Hills Adult Education office at 937-378-6131 Ext. 357.

Medical office classes offered

The Adult Education Department at Southern Hills Career and Technical Center is offering several courses in the medical office field.

A 10-week Medical Terminology class begins April 16.

The class will meet on Mondays from 6-9 p.m. at Southern Hills Career and Technical Center, 9193 Hamer Road, Georgetown.

The purpose of this course is to assist the student in gaining an understanding of medical terminology through learning the component parts of medical terms—roots, prefixes and suffixes.

The medical terms related to each bodily system, and the medical terms related to the diseases and abnormal conditions of each system will be discussed.

Abbreviations, laboratory tests and procedures will also be covered within this course.

For cost information or registration, please contact Southern Hills Adult Education Department at 937-378-6131 Ext. 357.

Buffer proposed for Ohio park drilling

BARBARA RODRIGUEZ Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio | A state natural resource agency’s proposed rules for drilling in state parks would require natural gas and oil companies to stay at least 300 feet — the length of a football field — from campgrounds, certain waterways and sites deemed historically or archaeologically valuable.

Documents on proposed rules were released by the state Department of Natural Resources this week after the Ohio chapter of the Sierra Club filed a lawsuit claiming the agency ignored repeated requests by the group to review them.

The proposals for drilling leases also includes an 89-page report listing “best management practices” on topics like site restoration and guidelines for emergency and pollution incidents. Other proposals include state approval before companies could store drilling waste in pits and an agreement on the locations of all drilling equipment.

Eastern Ohio is in the midst of a natural gas boom as developers seek to capture rights to Utica Shale deposits. The state passed a law in September that opened its parks and other state-held lands for drilling, and officials have been developing leasing terms for drilling companies.

Opponents say they’re concerned about the environmental impact of the drilling, which includes hydraulic fracturing, or “fracking.” The process involves drillers blasting millions of gallons of water, sand and chemicals deep underground to break up rock deposits.

Supporters of the law say there’s a potentially vast reservoir of oil and gas in the Utica Shale, which lies below the Marcellus Shale, where oil companies in Pennsylvania have drilled thousands of wells in search of natural gas and oil.

But natural gas drilling has become a contentious issue in Pennsylvania, where public health advocates have criticized a new law that will limit accessible medical information on illnesses that may be related to gas drilling. It takes effect April 14.

Cincinnati Reds reliever Alfredo Simon (31) watches as the Washington Nationals celebrate after Ryan Zimmerman scored the winning run on a wild pitch during the 10th inning on Thursday in Washington. The Nationals defeated the Reds 3-2.

WASHINGTON | Ryan Zimmerman scored on Alfredo Simon's wild pitch with two outs in the 10th inning, helping the Nationals extend their best start since moving to Washington with a 3-2 victory over the Cincinnati Reds on Thursday.

The Nationals improved to 5-2, good for first place in the NL East and treating an announced sellout crowd of 40,907 to a win in the home opener for the first time since 2008.

Simon (0-1) hit Zimmerman with a pitch leading off the 10th, and one out later, Jayson Werth singled. A groundout pushed the runners to second and third with two outs. With Roger Bernadina at the plate, Simon threw an 0-1 pitch in the dirt, and Zimmerman slid under the tag after catcher Devin Mesoraco collected the ball and threw to Simon.

Zimmerman made up for some fielding issues he had at third base, including an error in the third inning, and balls he let get past him for hits in the eighth and ninth.

Craig Stammen (1-0) struck out the side in the 10th for the win.

The Nationals took a 2-0 lead into the ninth inning, but Brad Lidge blew the save. Lidge is sharing closer duties for Washington with Henry Rodriguez because Drew Storen had surgery Wednesday and will be out for months.

With one out, Lidge walked Joey Votto, then gave up Scott Rolen's double and intentionally walked Jay Bruce to load the bases.

Lions drop 'Dogs for another marquee W

ZACK KLEMMER

VANCEBURG | Lewis County is starting to get the attention of opposing coaches, such as Lawrence County's Travis Feltner.

That's what victories against the likes of Ashland Blazer, East Carter, Greenup County, Russell and now the defending 15th Region champion Bulldogs will do for you.

The Lions won their ninth straight game Thursday, beating Lawrence 5-1. Sammy Holder got the win, holding the Bulldogs to four hits, and Corey Davis drove in two runs.

Levi Clark went 3-for-4 with an RBI for Lewis (12-2).

Lady Bears hold on for 'unbelievable' victory

BROOKSVILLE | The Bracken County Lady Bears rode the arm of Emma Conley, the bat and glove of Jordan Wills, timely hits and a solid defensive effort to post a 3-2 win over Bourbon County on Thursday evening.

The Lady Bears snapped Bourbon's five-game winning streak with the victory and avenged a 6-2 loss to the Lady Colonels in the Uncle Pete Knoll Classic on March 30 in Taylor Mill.

Conley was working on a four-hit shut-out until the seventh inning when Bourbon's Hannah Wagner lined a one-out home run over the fence in left-center field, scoring Allison Sandefur, who led off the frame with a single to center. Pinch-hitter Miranda Ingram followed with a double into the right field corner and Destinee Arnold reached on an infield single.

Owens signs with Alice Lloyd

VANCEBURG | Lewis County has blended steady upperclassman leadership with an ultra-talented youthful core to become perhaps the most pleasant surprise, so far, in the 16th Region.

Well, that is, to outside observers.

The Lions aren't at all taken aback by their 12-2 start, especially a leader in that older group, senior Connor Owens, who signed a letter of intent Thursday to play collegiately at Alice Lloyd College.

"We came together really in the fall and we wanted to make this last year special, especially me, this being my last year," Owens said. "We knew that we could be able to have this great of a year, we just had to go out and play every day."

That isn't blind egotism so much as it is knowledge the Lions have put in the work to get to where they are.

"The seniors bought in quick, very quick, and they were coming into the season wanting to win and had a desire to win," first-year Lewis coach Keith Prater said. "And it's easy for us as coaches to say, 'Let's do this,' or whatever, but when you've got teammates out there encouraging you and pushing you to get better every day, it makes this a better baseball team."

"All their hard work's paid off, and we've worked awful hard," Owens has gotten off to a solid start with the stick to begin the season, hitting .375 through 12 games, but it's his glove work that caught the eye of Eagles co-coach Jason Stowers, who spearheaded Owens' recruitment, first

DEMING CRUISES TO 12-0
WIN OVER AUGUSTA

Darrin Edwards tossed a five-inning one-hitter to lead the Deming Black Devils to a 12-0 mercy-rule win over visiting Augusta on Thursday.

Glenn Chaffins had a 2-for-2 day at the plate for Deming, including a double.

Jordan Earlywine cracked a three-base hit for the Devils and Calvin Schalch went 1-for-2 at the plate to assist in the Deming offensive effort.

The Devils will be in action in the 10th Region All "A" Classic semifinals on Saturday at Nicholas County. — LI

FLEMING ALUM BROWN
STARTING UPIKE CATCHER

Fleming County graduate Kayla Brown, currently a freshman at the University of Pikeville, is the starting catcher for the Bears and recently had a big day at the plate.

In a 13-0 win over Bluefield College last Wednesday, Brown drove in four runs with a double and two singles.

Brown is hitting .257 on the season with three doubles, seven runs batted in and 12 runs scored for the 14-22 Bears. She also leads UPIke in stolen bases with nine steals in 10 attempts. — LI

OHSAA TO ADD
SEVENTH FOOTBALL
DIVISION FOR 2013

The Ohio High School Athletic Association Board of Directors voted Friday to add a seventh football division, splitting its largest division in two.

Division I will be limited to the largest 10 percent of schools in the state, according to a Thursday OHSAA news release. The rest of the state's 644 schools will be divided equally among the remaining six divisions.

Each division places 32 teams in the state playoffs.

Manchester is the only local Ohio school to sponsor varsity football and does so in Division VI. Greyhounds coach Jason Mantell said Thursday by email that he anticipates Manchester will stay in the state's smallest division.

"The only way we may be affected is if we change regions due to other schools changing divisions," Mantell said. "I like the decision and I believe it is more equitable for the small Division I schools." — LI

BENGALS AGREE TO DEAL WITH COWBOYS
CB NEWMAN

CINCINNATI | The Bengals have agreed to a deal with cornerback Terence Newman, an unrestricted free agent from Dallas who struggled in pass coverage last season.

The 33-year-old cornerback was the fifth overall pick in 2003. He went to the Pro Bowl in 2007 and 2009. He was targeted in coverage last season, and the Cowboys released him last month.

Newman is Cincinnati's latest addition to a secondary that was a strong point two years ago, when Johnathan Joseph and Leon Hall formed one of the NFL's best cornerback tandems. Joseph left for Houston after the 2010 season, and Hall tore his left Achilles tendon in November.

The Bengals signed 32-year-old Nate Clements to replace Joseph last year. They've re-signed nickel cornerback Adam "Pacman" Jones this offseason and added cornerback Jason Allen. — AP

BENGALS SEND LB
RIVERS TO GIANTS
FOR DRAFT PICK

CINCINNATI | The Bengals traded linebacker Keith Rivers to the New York Giants on Thursday for a fifth-round draft pick, ending his four-year stay in Cincinnati marred by frequent injuries.

Rivers missed all last season recovering from surgery on his right wrist. He's been limited to 35 games in four seasons. — AP

REDS

FROM A7

The free pass didn’t work though, because Ryan Ludwick hit a two-run single past Zimmerman to tie the game.

The Nationals loaded the bases in the bottom of the ninth but failed to score because Danny Espinosa grounded into a double play.

Earlier, it looked as if Nationals starter Gio Gonzalez would get his first win for his new team, which acquired him from Oakland for four prospects over the winter.

Gonzalez threw seven innings of two-hit ball, and fill-in cleanup hitter Adam LaRoche delivered a two-run, bases-loaded single in the fifth to put Washington ahead.

Gonzalez gave up a pair of doubles — to Bruce in the second, and Mesoraco in the fifth — and that was it, before leaving to a partial standing ovation and a handshake from manager Davey Johnson. Gonzalez didn’t walk a batter.

He even added his first major league hit, for good measure, a blooper of a single to left off Mat Latos with one out in the fifth, then rolled his neck, smiled broadly and chuckled a bit while standing on the bag at first.

Ian Desmond followed with a single, and Latos walked Espinosa to load the bases for Zimmerman, who signed a new contract during spring training that ties him to the Nationals through at least 2019. Zimmerman grounded to shortstop Zack Cozart, who threw home for the forceout.

LaRoche, the first baseman who played in only 43 games last season because of shoulder problems, was up next — and he came through. Hitting fourth in the lineup in place of the injured Michael Morse, LaRoche bounced a single through the middle to put the hosts ahead.

Latos went five innings, giving up two runs, five hits and three walks. It was much better than his less-than-five-inning first outing for the Reds, who got him from San Diego in a trade.

Cincinnati, still without injured second baseman Brandon Phillips, has scored eight runs in its past four games.

“I’m not a baseball genius, but I think this team’s a lot better than the ones we’ve had in the past,” Nationals owner Mark Lerner said. “We’re excited about how this season could go. But a lot of it’s not in our hands. Injuries and everything else could come into play, as they already have, unfortunately. Hopefully there’s enough depth here to get us through and make a run at it this September.”

NOTES: Phillips sat out a third consecutive game because of a left hamstring injury. Manager Dusty Baker doesn’t expect Phillips to play before Sunday. ... Zimmerman made a diving reflex catch on Ludwick’s liner leading off the fifth. ... A moment of silence was observed in memory of late Hall of Famer Gary Carter during the pregame ceremonies.

A video montage of Carter playing for the Montreal Expos — the franchise that moved to Washington in 2005 — and the New York Mets was shown on the scoreboard.

AROUND THE MAJOR LEAGUES

Bumgarner pitches Giants past Moyer, Rockies, 4-2

Associated Press

DENVER | No win for the ages. Or, for that matter, the aged.

Madison Bumgarner took a no-hit bid into the sixth and scattered four hits over 7 1-3 innings in the San Francisco Giants’ 4-2 win over the Colorado Rockies on Thursday.

At 49, Moyer failed in his second attempt to become the oldest pitcher to win a major league game.

Moyer (0-2) surrendered four runs, two earned, and eight hits in 5 1-3 innings. He walked one, struck out three and hit a batter before leaving to a standing ovation in the sixth.

The 22-year-old Bumgarner (1-1), who wasn’t even born when Moyer made his major league debut in 1986, stifled a Rockies lineup that had produced 17 runs and 22 hits the night before. He gave up one run, struck out two and walked two while throwing 117 pitches.

Brian Wilson got the final three outs, converting his first save opportunity of the season. It wasn’t easy, though, and he needed 32 pitches.

PHILLIES 3, MARLINS 1

PHILADELPHIA | Shane Victorino and Ty Wigginton homered, Joe Blanton pitched seven strong innings and Philadelphia beat Miami in the Marlins’ second game without suspended manager Ozzie Guillen.

Blanton (1-1) allowed three hits and a run in his first start following an injury-plagued season. Blanton had two lengthy stints on the disabled list and pitched in only 11 games in 2011, the lowest for a full season in his career.

The Marlins lost their second straight game without Guillen. He was suspended five games by the Marlins on Tuesday for saying he admired Cuban dictator Fidel Castro.

Jonathan Papelbon took the mound in the ninth to Marilyn Manson’s “Antichrist Superstar,” and quickly ran into trouble. But he retired John Buck on a game-ending double play for his second save.

Miami starter Mark Buehrle (0-2) allowed three runs and eight hits in 6 1-3 innings.

CUBS 8, BREWERS 0
CHICAGO | Matt Garza pitched three-hit ball for 8 2-3 innings, and the Cubs roughed up Zack Greinke to avoid a four-game sweep.

Garza (1-0) struck out nine and walked two as the Cubs improved to 2-5. He induced Cesar Izturis to hit into an inning-ending double play in the second, starting a stretch in which he retired 16 of 17 batters.

Nori Aoki reached with two outs in the ninth when Garza threw his comebacker over first baseman Bryan LaHair and into the stands for a two-base error. Garza was removed after 119 pitches and Shawn Camp needed just four pitches to end it, retiring pinch hitter George Kotaras on a groundout.

Greinke (1-1) allowed eight earned runs for the first time since July 26, 2010, against Minnesota. He gave up nine hits and needed 84 pitches to get through 3 2-3 innings.

San Francisco Giants starting pitcher Madison Bumgarner throws against the Colorado Rockies during the sixth inning of the Giants’ 4-2 win on Thursday in Denver.

Boesch drove in four runs on his 27th birthday Friday, leading the Detroit Tigers to a 7-2 victory over the Tampa Bay Rays for their fifth win in six games to start the season.

Drew Smyly gave up a run in four-plus innings in his major league debut. Despite having the American League’s best record, Tigers starters have not earned a win.

Collin Balester (1-0) won this one with two innings of relief.

The Tigers trailed 1-0 until scoring three runs off Jeff Niemann (0-1) in the fifth.

RANGERS 5, MARINERS 3

ARLINGTON, Texas | Michael Young hit a two-run homer and had four RBIs to back Derek Holland, leading the Rangers over Seattle.

Young put Texas ahead with an RBI single. Then with the Rangers leading 1-0 in the fifth inning for the third straight game, Young hit an opposite-field homer into the first row in right for a 3-0 lead against Jason Vargas (1-1). Young added a run-scoring single in the eighth off Erasmo Ramirez.

Holland (1-0) allowed two runs and five hits in 7 1-3 innings, struck out eight and walked none. He extended a scoreless streak by Texas starters to 22 2-3 innings before Alex Liddi’s RBI single in the sixth.

TWINS 10, ANGELS 9
MINNEAPOLIS | Justin Morneau hit a two-run, tiebreaking homer in the eighth inning and Minnesota rallied from six runs down to beat the Angels.

Joe Mauer went deep, too, hitting a three-run shot off Dan Haren in the fifth that cut into a 6-0 lead the Angels built against Francisco Liriano.

BRACKEN

FROM A7

Conley worked out of the jam by retiring Ariel Dailey on a pop-up to shortstop, sending Sadie Stanfield to the plate with the tying and go-ahead runners on base.

Stanfield rifled a line drive that appeared to be destined for extra bases into right-center field but Wills, who gave Bracken its first run with a home run to center field, made a sensational diving catch to hold off the Lady Colonels and preserve the victory.

Bracken County coach Chad Persinger was elated after the game.

“This is a perfect example of a great team effort and it came against one of the best teams and pitchers (Haley Wagner) in the region,” Persinger said. “We made all the plays in the field and we got some big two-out hits. Emma brings it every game and she works extremely hard. I’m thrilled for Jordan too. She got her first career home run and that diving catch was unbelievable. Jordan is always wanting to catch more fly balls in practice and she was the same way today before the game.”

Neither team committed an error in the well-played contest and the Lady Bears turned a line drive to first baseman McKenzie Jefferson into a double play when she nailed a Bourbon baserunner at second base. Bracken also came up with back-to-back teamwork plays in the sixth inning on hard-hit balls. The first was a shot off the bat of Stanfield that went off third baseman Cassidy Jefferson’s glove to Bailey Cummins at shortstop, whose throw to first was scooped out of the dirt by McKenzie Jefferson. The next hitter, Kandice Green, hit a ball that Conley deflected to second baseman Brooke Woods, who completed the 1-4-3 play into an out with her throw to first.

Cassidy Jefferson also turned in a outstanding play on a well-hit ball in the opening frame when she fielded Stanfield’s shot to her left and forced Dailey at second base.

“Cassidy played a heck of a game both in the field and at the plate,” said Persinger. “I’m happy for her too, she’s had a very tough week with a death in the family and she really stepped up for us tonight.”

It was her base hit to right field in the fifth inning that produced the third Bracken run.

With one out, Woods reached on an infield single, stole second, moved to third base on the second out of the inning and scored what would turn out to be the winning run on Jefferson’s solid single.

In the previous frame, the Lady Bears got clutch two-out hits from Madison Ishmael, who doubled into the gap in left-center, and a line single to left field from McKenzie Jefferson to produce a run.

The Lady Bears (9-7) return to the field on Saturday when they will host a round-robin event. Bracken plays Scott at 11 a.m. and meets Russell at 2:30 p.m.

George Zimmerman, center, is directed by a Seminole County Deputy and his attorney Mark O'Mara during a court hearing Thursday, in Sanford, Fla. Zimmerman has been charged with second-degree murder in the shooting death of the 17-year-old Trayvon Martin.

Zimmerman makes court appearance in Fla. shooting

GREG BLUESTEIN AND TAMARA LUSH
Associated Press

SANFORD, Fla. | Neighborhood watch volunteer George Zimmerman made his first court appearance Thursday on a second-degree murder charge in the shooting death of Trayvon Martin, as a court document provided new details on the prosecution's case. During the brief appearance, Zimmerman stood up straight, looked straight ahead and wore a gray prison jumpsuit. He spoke only to answer "Yes, sir," twice after he was asked basic questions about the charge against him and his attorney. His hair was shaved down to stubble and he had a thin goatee, which appeared consistent with his booking photo from the day before. He had resurfaced Wednesday to turn himself in after weeks in hiding. Judge Mark E. Herr said he found probable cause to move ahead with the case and that an arraignment would be held on May 29 before another judge. A document prepared by prosecutors shed some light on why they chose to charge Zimmerman. The affidavit says Martin's mother identified screams heard in the background of a 911 call as her son's. There had been some question as to whether Martin or Zimmerman was the one calling for help.

Prosecutors also interviewed a friend of Martin's who was talking to him just before the shooting. The affidavit says Martin told the witness he was being followed and was scared. Martin tried to run home, the affidavit says, but was followed by Zimmerman: "Zimmerman got out of his vehicle and followed Martin." The affidavit says that "Zimmerman disregarded the police dispatcher" who told him to stop, and "continued to follow Martin who was trying to return to his home." The Orlando Sentinel obtained the affidavit of probable cause before it was filed with the courthouse.

Speaking to reporters after the hearing, attorney Mark O'Mara said he was concerned that the case up to now has been handled in the public eye, with details coming out in piecemeal fashion. "It's really supposed to happen in the courtroom," O'Mara said, deflecting questions about evidence in the case and his client's mental state. Earlier Thursday on NBC's "Today" show, O'Mara said Zimmerman is stressed and very tired and hoping to get bail. Meanwhile, Martin's mother raised eyebrows with her own comments on "Today" about the accidental nature of the case, but she clarified what she meant in another interview later in the day.

Syrian opposition vows protest to test shaky truce

ELIZABETH A. KENNEDY AND ZEINA KARAM
Associated Press

BEIRUT | Syria's opposition called for widespread protests Friday to test the regime's commitment to an internationally brokered cease-fire that the U.N. chief described as so fragile it could collapse with a single gunshot. Regime forces halted heavy shelling and other major attacks in line with the truce that began at dawn Thursday, though there were accusations of scattered violence by both sides. The government ignored demands to pull troops back to barracks, however, defying a key aspect of the plan, which aims to calm a year-old uprising that has killed 9,000 people and has pushed the country toward civil war.

"The onus is on the government of Syria to prove that their words will be matched by their deeds at this time," U.N. Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon told reporters in Geneva. He said the world was watching with skeptical eyes. "This cease-fire process is very fragile. It may be broken any time," Ban added, saying "another gunshot" could doom the truce.

The presence of tanks and troops could discourage any large gatherings, but the leader of the opposition Syrian National Council, Burhan Ghalioun, urged Syrians to demonstrate peacefully on Friday. "Tomorrow, like every Friday, the Syrian people are called to demonstrate even more and put the regime in front of its responsibilities — put the international community in front of its responsibilities."

A massive protest would be an important test of the cease-fire — whether President Bashar Assad will allow his forces to hold their fire and risk ushering in a weeks-long sit-in or losing control over territory that government forces recently recovered from rebels.

So far, the military crackdown has prevented protesters from recreating the powerful displays of dissent seen in Egypt's Tahrir Square, where hundreds of thousands of people camped out in an extraordinary scene that drove longtime leader Hosni Mubarak from power.

If the truce holds, it would be the first time the regime has observed an internationally brokered cease-fire since Assad's regime launched a brutal crackdown 13 months ago on mass protests calling for his ouster.

"The test will come when we start to see protests across the length and breadth of the country," said Salman Shaikh, director of the Brookings Doha Center. "Is the Assad regime willing to accept that there will likely be hundreds of thousands of people on the streets in the next few days? And will they accept those protesters, if they are not breaking any laws, occupying certain spaces and towns and centers of towns, should that start to arise?"

An outbreak of violence at a chaotic rally could give the regime a pretext for ending the truce. And it would be difficult to determine the source of such an attack, given that Syria is largely sealed off from journalists and outside observers.

The U.N. chief's envoy, Kofi Annan, urged the 15-nation U.N. Security Council to authorize an observer mission that would keep the cease-fire going and to demand that Assad order his troops back to barracks, U.N. diplomats said. The council could adopt a resolution on the observers as early as Friday, the diplomats said on condition of anonymity because the meeting was closed.

Western powers, skeptical that Assad will call off the killings, said an end to violence is just the first step.

U.K. Prime Minister David Cameron urged Syria's allies Russia and China to help "tighten the noose" around Assad's regime. Russia and China have blocked strong action against Syria at the Security Council, fearing it would open the door to possible NATO airstrikes like those that helped topple Libya's Moammar Gadhafi.

U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton noted that Assad failed to comply with key obligations, such as pulling back tanks.

"The burden of fully and visibly meeting all of these obligations continues to rest with the regime," she said. "They cannot pick and choose. For it to be meaningful, this apparent halt in violence must lead to a credible political process and a peaceful, inclusive democratic transition."

The U.S. Embassy in Damascus published an image on its Facebook page that purports to show tanks deployed within the city of Homs.

"Clearly, Assad is not complying," the embassy said.

Bassma Kodmani, a spokeswoman for the opposition Syrian National Council, said a heavy security presence, including checkpoints and snipers, remained in the streets despite the cease-fire.

"There is no evidence of any significant withdrawal," she told reporters in Geneva. "The real test for us today is if people can go and demonstrate peacefully," she added. "This is the real reality check."

But analysts said the apparent halt in government attacks suggests Assad's allies are pressuring him for the first time, after shielding him from international condemnation in the past. Annan has visited Russia, Iran and China to get the broadest possible backing for the plan.

On Thursday, the Russian and Chinese ambassadors called the Syrian cease-fire an important step and said they supported implementation of all points in the Annan plan — including the troop and equipment withdrawal.

"We're encouraged that we do now have a cessation of violence in Syria," Russia's U.N. Ambassador Vitaly Churkin said. "We hope it holds. Everybody needs to behave with maximum prudence for that to happen."

"Frankly, there is one thing which Mr. Annan, I hope, is going to accomplish very soon — clear-cut agreement by opposition leaders to enter into dialogue with the Syrian government," Churkin added. "This so far has not happened."

There were signs of how easily the Annan plan could fray.

In the hours after the 6 a.m. deadline, at least four civilians were reported killed — three of them by sniper fire — and the state-run news agency said "terrorist groups" set off a roadside bomb that killed a soldier. But there was no sign of the heavy shelling, rocket attacks and sniper fire that have become routine.

Troops also intensified searches at checkpoints, tightening controls ahead of possible large-scale protests Friday.

Although Syria promised to comply with the cease-fire, the regime carved out an important condition — that it still has a right to defend itself against the terrorists that it says are behind the rebellion.

The government denies that it is facing a popular uprising.

Instead, the regime says, terrorists are carrying out a foreign conspiracy to destroy Syria. Because the regime has treated any sign of dissent as a provocation, many observers fear that an abrupt end to the bloodshed will be all but impossible.

In the early days of the Syrian rebellion, Syrian forces used tanks, snipers and machine guns on peaceful protesters, driving many of them to take up arms. Since then, the uprising has transformed into an armed insurgency, with more and more protesters taking up arms and rebels forming a fighting force to bring down the regime.

The rebel Free Syrian Army, made up largely of army defectors, has said it will observe the cease-fire. But the opposition is not well-organized, and there are growing fears of groups looking to exploit the chaos.

Saudi Arabia and Qatar have called for arming the rebels, but even if they follow through there is no guarantee that such efforts could cripple Assad's well-armed regime.

Western powers have pinned their hopes on Annan's plan, in part because they are running out of options. NATO-style military intervention has been all but ruled out, in part because the conflict is so explosive. Syria has had a web of allegiances to powerful forces including Lebanon's Hezbollah and Shiite powerhouse Iran, and conflict could spark a regional conflagration.

With Thursday's relative ease in violence, many see a U.N. observer team as a key next step.

Romney courts gun-rights group in presidential bid

DAVID A. LIEB
Associated Press

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. | Running for the Senate in Massachusetts, Mitt Romney once assured voters in a state with strong gun-control laws: “I don’t line up with the NRA.” Now the likely Republican presidential nominee, Romney will headline the National Rifle Association’s annual convention Friday and assure tens of thousands of gun-rights activists that he’s squarely on their side.

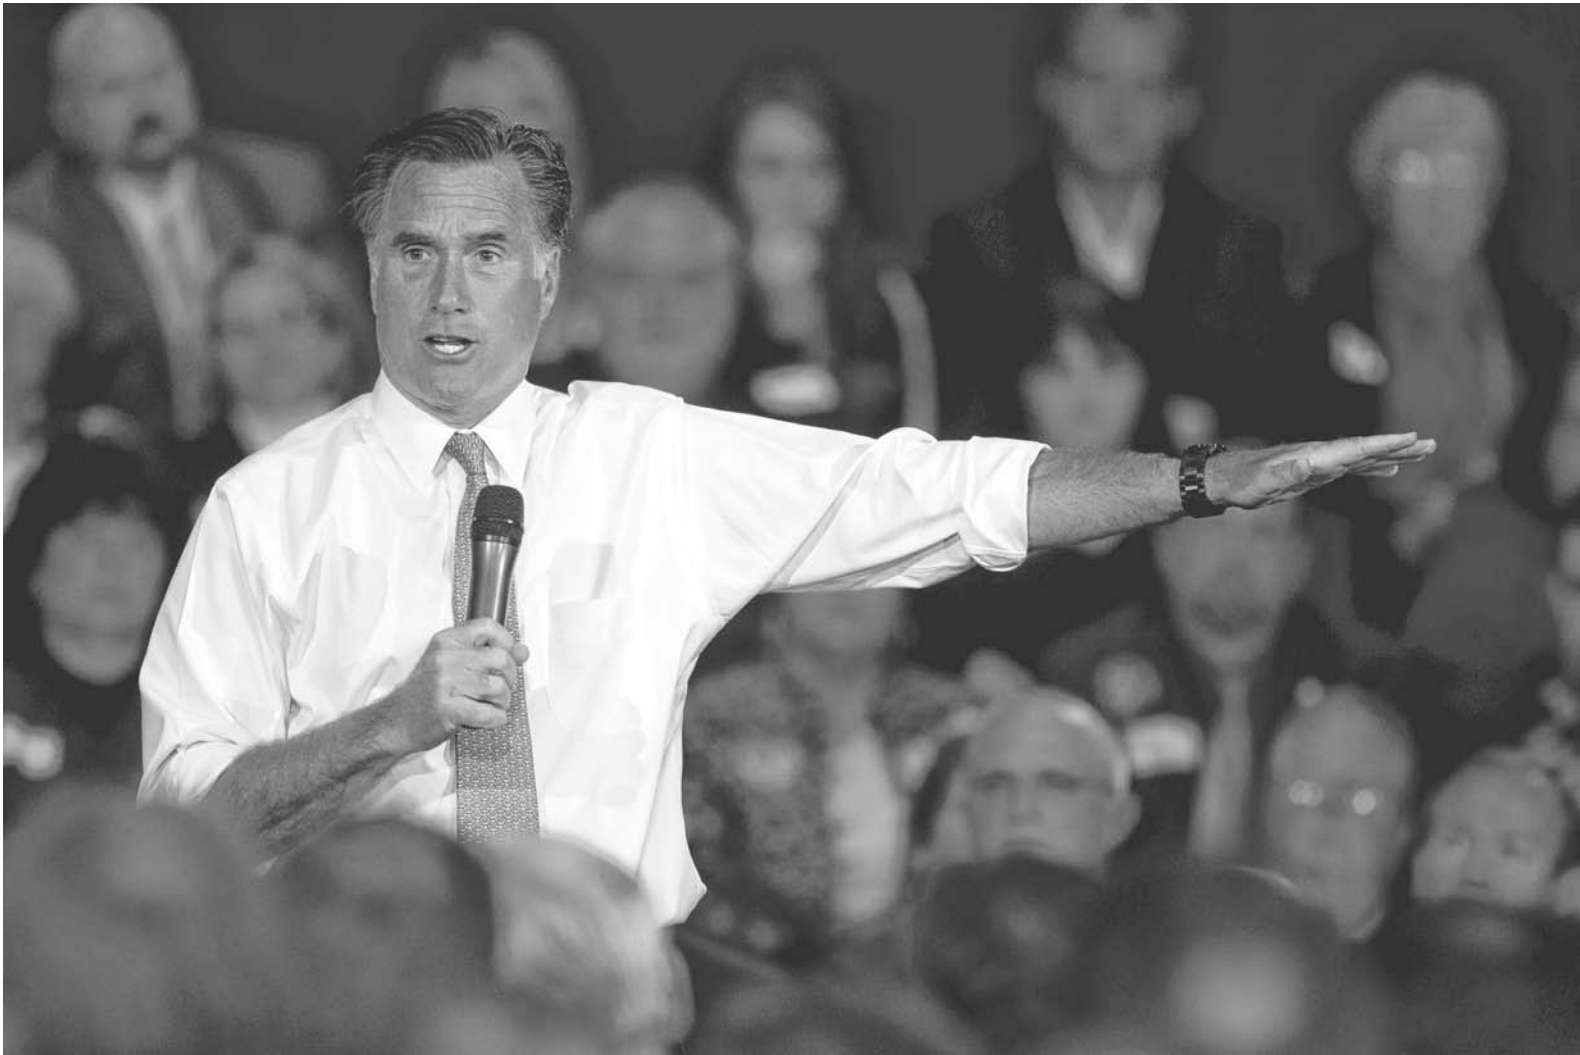

Coming just days after rival Rick Santorum dropped out of the nomination race, the NRA convention in St. Louis provides Romney an opportunity to shore up his credentials with an important conservative constituency that badly wants to oust Democratic President Barack Obama.

Romney leads a list of prominent Republicans — including Santorum, Newt Gingrich, House Majority Leader Eric Cantor and Wisconsin Gov. Scott Walker — who are scheduled to address more than 65,000 convention registrants during a session billed as a “celebration of American values.” Although Obama has virtually ignored gun issues during his term, the NRA considers him a foe and plans to mount an aggressive effort against him.

The NRA has spent $20 million to $30 million in past presidential elections, said NRA spokesman Andrew Arulanandam. It hopes to exceed that amount this year in an effort that is likely to include mail, phone calls and TV, radio, Internet and newspaper ads, he said.

As the all-but-certain Republican presidential nominee, Romney hopes to reap the rewards of the NRA’s broad network, which includes more than 4 million dues-paying members.

“Governor Romney is a strong supporter of Second Amendment rights,” said campaign spokesman Ryan Williams, referring to gun rights. “He’s always supported the Second Amendment and as

ASSOCIATED PRESS
Republican presidential candidate, former Massachusetts Gov. Mitt Romney, speaks to a crowd during a campaign event, in Warwick, R.I., Wednesday.

president would continue to support the Second Amendment.”

Yet Romney’s alignment with the NRA also comes at a time when gun laws have been under national scrutiny.

The NRA was a main backer of Florida’s “stand your ground” law, which gives people latitude to use deadly force rather than retreat from danger. That self-defense law has been much discussed in relation to the February shooting in which a neighborhood watch volunteer fatally shot an unarmed teenager. After authorities initially declined to charge him, George Zimmerman was charged Wednesday with second-degree murder in the death of Trayvon Martin. Zimmerman’s attorney has said the defendant will plead not guilty and invoke the “stand your ground” law.

Romney has said little about whether he favors such laws, though he has called the shooting a “terrible tragedy” and has said it was appropriate for prosecutors to look into the case.

After the shooting, Obama said, “If I had a son, he’d look like Trayvon.” And while he said at the time that he supported the investigation, he didn’t address the issue of guns.

In fact, Obama has hardly talked about the issue since a couple of months after the January 2011 assassination attempt on Rep. Gabrielle Giffords in Tucson, Ariz., when the president promised to develop new steps on gun safety.

Romney hasn’t always been in the NRA’s good graces.

It was as a challenger to Democratic Sen. Edward Kennedy in 1994 that Romney professed not to line up with the group. When he was running for governor in 2002, the NRA shied away from making any endorsement and gave Romney’s Democratic opponent a better rating on gun-rights issues.

Massachusetts quadrupled its gun-licensing fee while Romney was governor. He also signed a 2004 law that made permanent a ban on assault-type weapons, though it was coupled with measures backed by gun-rights groups, such as a lengthening of the firearm license period from four to six years and the creation of an appeals board for people seeking to restore their gun licenses.

As he was considering his first presidential run in 2006, Romney signed up for a lifetime membership in the National Rifle Association.

For Brian Dorsey — a central Missouri turkey farmer who declares “I’m all about gun-rights” — Romney’s appearance at the NRA convention in St. Louis is an important element in assuring Dorsey’s vote come November.

“It signals to me that he cares about gun owners and hunters,” Dorsey said.

While some gun-control advocates might be turned off by Romney’s association with the NRA, there’s little likelihood such activists were going to vote for him anyway, leaving little political downside for Romney’s appeals to NRA faithful, said Dave Robertson, a political science professor at the University of Missouri-St. Louis.

“In these days of polarization, you want to make sure your partisans know that you’re on their side and don’t leave any doubt,” Robertson said. He added: “In some ways, he’s quite lucky this is occurring in April, where he can shore up the base at this point and he still has a number of months to reassure independent moderates that he has their interest at heart.”

Retired state fisheries division director Steve Eder is one of those independents still trying to decide whether to support Obama or Romney. An avid outdoorsman, Eder owns a variety of guns but is not an NRA member and considers himself a moderate when it comes to gun-control issues.

“I don’t see President Obama as being an outdoorsman, nor do I really see Mitt Romney as that type of person either,” said Eder, 61, of Jefferson City.

To Eder, that doesn’t really matter.

The economy commands greater attention. In this election, gun-rights are “secondary to a lot of other issues,” he said.

Gary and Joan Himes will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary on April 22.

Himes anniversary celebration April 22

A celebration of the 50th wedding anniversary of Gary and Joan (Carpenter) Himes will be given by their children, Gary Jr. and Greg and Erin.

Gary and Joan were married on a rainy, Friday evening, April 6, 1962, at the Central United Methodist Church in Maysville.

Gary retired as Brown County recorder and Joan from the Aberdeen Post Office.

Gary Jr., Greg and Erin invite family and friends of Gary and Joan for a buffet lunch on Sunday, April 22, 2012, from 12:30-5 p.m., at the Aberdeen Community Building, behind the firehouse on Budig Drive in Aberdeen.

No invitations are being sent locally. The couple requests no gifts just the honor of your presence.

Pyles and DeBin to wed in June

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Howard Pyles of May's Lick, are proud to announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Lydah McLain Pyles, to Joseph Ryan DeBin, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Joseph DeBin of Charleston, S. C.

Miss Pyles attended Mason County High School and graduated from Phillips Exeter Academy, Exeter, N.H. She is a graduate of Centre College in Danville. She was employed in publishing in New York City and is currently the director of Development and Marketing of Literary Arts, in Portland, Ore.

Mr. DeBin graduated from Lexington Catholic High School, in Lexington, a graduate of Centre College, and of the Lewis and Clark Northwestern School of Law, in Portland, Ore. He was employed in the United Arab Emirates and in Dundee, Scotland, before returning to Portland, where he is currently an attorney of counsel with Pacific Northwest Law, LLP.

Maysville's Doctor Frances Keating recently had a day most mothers dream of, all three of her children graduated from college.

Therese O'Neil, a 2000 Mason County High School graduate received her master's of psychology from Louisville's Spalding University and is currently working toward her doctorate degree.

Connor O'Neil a 2004 Mason County High School graduate received his LLB from McGill Law School and Kathryn O'Neil also a 2004 graduate of Mason County High School received her bachelor of arts degree with honors from Morehead State University.

Doctor Keating practiced medicine in Vanceburg and Mason County for many years. The family attends St. Patrick Church in Maysville.

Centre Academy Dance Team in competition

Centre Academy's Dance Team has been to two of their four dance competitions planned for this season. Their first competition was Showstoppers, which was held in Louisville. Cynthia Thomas received a Platinum Award in Competitive Jazz age 18-19, first place in the Jazz Category and tied for 10th place out of 40 soloists ages 15-19. Dancers Maria Hyrzca and Emily Kern received gold first in the Teen Advanced Duet/Trio for "You Can't Stop the Beat" and "Slow Me Down." Those numbers also placed third and fourth overall for the day out of six duet/trios performers.

The Recreational Team members, Emma Farley, Ella Johnson, Jena Campbell, Sarah Vietze, Emily Thoroughman, Reese Burton and MaKayla Howard performed a Hip Hop piece to "Despicable Me." That number received a gold first and ninth overall in Performance Mini Small Group out of 20 numbers and "Shake Your Rail Feather" performed by Sarah Vietze, Emma Fraley, Ella Johnson and Jena Campbell placed eighth overall high score in the Mini Small Group. "Baby I'm A Star," with performers Emily Thoroughman, Reese Burton and MaKayla Howard, earned a first Gold Award in Jazz and fifth overall high score in Mini duet/trio division out of nine. All of these great awards earned them a spot at National's.

The second competition of the season was Dance Master's of the Bluegrass, in Lexington. "Despicable Me," Hip Hop received a high silver trophy. "You Can't Stop the Beat," Musical Theatre and "Slow Me Down," Contemporary received a silver trophy. "I Gotcha" received a gold trophy. All dances scored 83 and higher therefore they all qualified to go to Anaheim, Calif. this July.

Choreographers and teachers for these students are Cynthia Thomas, Linda Frey Thomas and Michael Thomas. The students were accompanied by their families. If you would like to get more information email centreacademy@maysvilleky.net .

ADVICE

Family looks for gentle way to ease away from grandpa

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for 16 years and have two teenagers. "Mom" died two years ago, and my husband is an only child. How can we tell my widowed father-in-law that we need a weekend to ourselves?

"Pop," who's 87, lives an hour away and drives to see us every weekend, staying until Monday afternoon. We don't doubt that he's lonely, although he does play bridge twice a week and has dinner with friends occasionally. We love him dearly and would never want to hurt his feelings, but we long for a weekend for "just us."

DEAR ABBY

How do we ask Pop not to visit? We believe he's still in mourning over the loss of his wife of 60 years. We don't want to add to his heartache. — TORN IN TEXAS

DEAR TORN: You do need to talk to your father-in-law and set some boundaries. Accomplish it by setting a predetermined visitation schedule that allows you time alone with your husband and nuclear family without him being present. A way to get that message across would be to say: "Pop, we love you, but we need some time to ourselves, so let's schedule your visits for twice a month. YOU pick the weekends."

DEAR ABBY: The neighbor above my apartment has a snoring problem. My bedroom is directly below his. Around 10 every night he starts snoring to the point that it sounds like an elephant lives above me. I have to sleep with my TV on and sometimes the radio.

Please tell me what to do. Should I confront this neighbor? Should I complain to management? Or should I just live with it? — FED UP IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR FED UP: Write your neighbor a letter and explain to him there is a problem. He may not know that he snores. If he's snoring steadily, but stops for 20 or 30 seconds before starting again, it could indicate that he has a serious medical condition that should be discussed with his doctor.

If the apartment above you has poor insulation, a carpet under his bed could muffle some of the sound. Playing a tape of "white noise" could block it out more restfully than your television or radio. Or, because adequate sleep is so important, you could ask a real estate attorney about the possibility of breaking your lease and leaving without penalty.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 23-year-old woman who will graduate from college soon. I am looking to undergo a post-college makeover. I want to find some clothes that will work in the professional world, but also mix for more casual environments. Taking a recent college grad's budget for this into account, what signature pieces should a young female have in her wardrobe? And what tips do you have for building a great collection over time? — YOUNG, BROKE, BUT FABULOUS

DEAR Y.B.F.: Start with two suits — one with a jacket and matching skirt, the other with jacket and slacks. Make both suits interchangeable and in a neutral color — black, navy or beige — whatever looks best on you. Add a couple of blouses and sweater sets, several pairs of shoes and a good handbag. Make sure to look for "classic" styles rather than trendy, and you will have the basis for a business wardrobe and the beginning of a great collection.

Dorothy's Ruby Slippers, from the "Wizard of Oz" are seen on display as part of a new exhibit, "American Stories," at the Smithsonian National Museum of American History in Washington, Wednesday. The National Museum of American History will open a new exhibit featuring iconic objects from pop culture along with objects dating back to the Pilgrims' arrival in 1620. "American Stories" will be a new chronology of U.S. history from the first encounters of Europeans and Native Americans to the 2008 presidential election.

WASHINGTON | Dorothy's ruby slippers from "The Wizard of Oz" have a new home with a diverse set of artifacts in a new timeline of American history that includes a piece of Plymouth Rock, a slave ship manifest, Alexander Graham Bell's telephone and Kermit the Frog at the Smithsonian Institution.

The National Museum of American History will open the exhibit Thursday featuring iconic objects from pop culture along with items dating to the Pilgrims' arrival in 1620 in Plymouth, Mass. "American Stories" will be a new chronology of U.S. history from the early encounters of Europeans and Native Americans to a Barack Obama campaign button written in Hebrew in the 2008 presidential election.

Dorothy's famed shoes from the 1939 movie will help show the emergence of American pop culture and its significance in forming our shared memories. Mixing items from pop culture into a broader timeline is a big change for the museum. For more than 20 years, the slippers have been shown in a separate gallery of memorable items from the movies and entertainment history. Now they will join other items that explore the nation's founding, growth and reforms, innovations and contemporary society.

"We're so getting away from the time when history was all about white men on horses," said Marc Pachter, the museum's interim director. "This is a broader definition of what is important to remember."

More than 100 objects are on display in the new gallery. Curators combed through the museum's vast collection and acquired objects that help show how the peopling of America through immigration and the convergence of cultural traditions created a distinctive place, Pachter said.

This is the museum's first major exhibit with a Spanish translation, which can be accessed online or with mobile smartphones. The museum also developed a mobile app with fuller descriptions of each object on display in English and Spanish.

Curators also are asking visitors to suggest objects that should be part of the American history collection. They can make suggestions in the exhibit or on the museum's website.

"We know that there are millions of untold American stories out there," Pachter said. "We will never tell them all, but we can do better in the range of what we collect and display."

Near the start of the timeline layout is Plymouth Rock and its mythic place in U.S. history, along with wampum beads made from shells that were prized by American Indians for their value as trading currency. Nearby is Ben Franklin's walking stick and three-piece silk suit worn at the Treaty of Alliance signing with France in 1778 during the Revolutionary War. The suit is on loan from the Massachusetts Historical Association.

An 1830s slave ship manifest from Alexandria, Va., was recently acquired by the museum and is being displayed for the first time. It records the sale of 83 enslaved Americans, their names and their descriptions to bring humanity to the horrors of slavery, said curator Bill Yeingst, who directed the "American Stories" project.

Something new brewing in (barrel) aged beers

BREWERS ROLLING OUT THE BARREL FOR FINE, AGED BEERS

MICHELLE LOCKE
Associated Press

Fine wine is said to improve with barrel aging. So why not fine beer?

That's the thinking behind the emerging craft beer trend of aging brews in the barrel to give them more complexity.

"There's something extra about the flavor," says Dougal Sharp, master brewer and owner of the Scotland-based company Innis & Gunn, which has just introduced its Irish Whiskey Cask Stout in the United States.

"Oak aging anything — a wine, a spirit or a beer — imparts enormous depth of flavor and mellowness and complexity. Just think about some of the best, the real premier cru oak-aged wines that you've had. You might not be able to point to exactly why you just love the wine, but you do because it has this enormous depth of flavor.

That's what barrel-aging gives beer."

The Innis & Gunn beer was a bit of an accident that began about a decade ago when Sharp, working for his family's brewing company in Edinburgh, got an order from an Irish whiskey maker looking for a custom-brewed beer to season whiskey barrels for a special finish. The plan was to throw out the beer once the seasoning process was over, and that's what happened at first. But then some distillery employees who apparently had practiced a little initiative intervened.

"I got a call one day from the distillery to say, 'You're not going to believe this but the workers who are emptying these barrels out don't want to throw the beer down the drain because they say it's just too delicious.'"

Sharp investigated and later, after refining the process, set up Innis & Gunn with his brother, Neil. (Innis and Gunn are the brothers' middle names.) The company also makes beer aged in old rum casks, but for now the limited-edition whiskey cask stout is the only beer available here.

Aged for 60 days in a three-step maturation process, the beer is priced at $12.99 a four-pack and there are plans to introduce it in draft form.

Though it's still a niche in the overall industry, wood- and barrel-aged beers merited their own category in the 2011 Great American Beer Festival, with 40 entries. And they're just one of the many developments to arise from the fast-moving craft beer scene.

"The entire American beer scene has changed over the past three decades because of today's small U.S. craft producers," says Julia Herz, craft beer program director at the Brewers Association, based in Boulder, Colo.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

In this undated image released by Innis & Gunn, Irish Whiskey Cask Stout is seen.

How big is craft beer? In March, the Brewers Association, which represents small and independent brewers, released preliminary 2011 data showing a 15 percent increase in craft brewers' retail sales from 2010 to 2011, representing a total barrel increase of 1.3 million.

At the Saxon + Parole restaurant in New York City, Innis & Gunn is served as well as a bourbon-barrel-aged beer, Curieux, from Allagash Brewing Co. in Portland, Me.

Both are "really delicious," especially for beer-lovers eager to try something different, says Naren Young, who oversees the beverage program at the restaurant. "For those people that want Bud Light, this is certainly not for them," he says. But the beers "are just home runs for those people who want to experiment."

He sees barrel-aged beer as another way craft beer producers are staking their claim as an alternative to mainstream offerings. And he likes the way it goes against the quick and fast trend that seems to apply just about everywhere else these days.

"Barrel-aging takes time and adds such a nice complexity," he says. "The craft movement has enlightened people to what small-batch beer can be."

A UTOPIAN ENDEAVOR

This is about the road problem at Utopia Estates. Trucks turning around peel up the asphalt. They should not black-top the turnarounds, they need to be concrete like on (Kentucky 9) so they won't be slipping when they turn around.

ACCOUNTABILITY REQUESTED

Since this city/county is exceedingly wealthy, how's about lowering the property taxes instead of gouging the people that are struggling in these harsh economic times. I would like to see a printout of all the taxes paid for one year — is this available for the public to see? Who are the special meeting people that vote to increase the property taxes?

LET THEM EAT CAKE

Why would Mason County High School offer a senior trip that would only include 20 students, 5 percent of the senior class, and exclude those who cannot afford the $1,800 each to go. Seems like discrimination.

AN AMISH COOK FAN

What happened to the Amish Cook? I enjoyed that more than anything in the paper.

SOGGY POLITICS

This is about the water system in Aberdeen; I think there are some on council who want water in Aberdeen and some vote no. That is wrong. It is just politics and water is really needed here. It is going to cost them in the long run.

DO AS I DOO-DOO

I was driving by the park in Aberdeen and the cops had the K-9 out there. Well the dog did his business and nobody cleaned it up. They should have to clean up after their dog like everyone else has to.

WATER BY FORCE

Government can go in and take property when it needs to and give the property owner what they say is a fair price. That is what Aberdeen needs to do with the land for the water wells. Give the woman a fair price and get on with the wells.

POLITICAL COMMENTARY

Weighing ups and downs of legalization

GEORGE WILL

“Marijuana probably provides less than 25 percent of the cartels' revenues. Legalizing it would take perhaps $10 billion from some bad and violent people, but the cartels would still make much more money from cocaine, heroin and methamphetamines than they would lose from marijuana legalization.

WASHINGTON — Amelioration of today's drug problem requires Americans to understand the significance of the 80/20 ratio. Twenty percent of American drinkers consume 80 percent of the alcohol sold here. The same 80-20 split obtains among users of illicit drugs.

About 3 million people — less than 1 percent of America's population — consume 80 percent of illegal hard drugs. Drug trafficking organizations can be most efficiently injured by changing the behavior of the 20 percent of heavy users, and we are learning how to do so. Reducing consumption by the 80 percent of casual users will not substantially reduce the northward flow of drugs or the southward flow of money.

Consider current policy concerning the only addictive intoxicant currently available as a consumer good — alcohol. America's alcohol industry, which is as dependent on the 20 percent of heavy drinkers as they are on alcohol, markets its products aggressively, and effectively. Because marketing can drive consumption, America's distillers, brewers and vintners spend $6 billion on advertising and promoting their products. Americans' experience with marketing's power inclines them to favor prohibition and enforcement over legalization and marketing of drugs.

But this choice has consequences: More Americans are imprisoned for drug offenses or drug-related probation and parole violations than for property crimes. And although America spends five times more jailing drug dealers than it did 30 years ago, the prices of cocaine and heroin are 80 percent to 90 percent lower than 30 years ago.

In "Drugs and Drug Policy: What Everyone Needs to Know," policy analysts Mark Kleiman, Jonathan Caulkins and Angela Hawken argue that imprisoning low-ranking, street-corner dealers is pointless: A $200 transaction can cost society $100,000 for a three-year sentence. And imprisoning large numbers of dealers produces an army of people who, emerging from prison with blighted employment prospects, can only deal drugs. Which is why, although a few years ago Washington, D.C., dealers earned an average of $30 an hour, today they earn less than the federal minimum wage ($7.25).

Dealers, aka "pushers," have almost nothing to do with initiating drug use by future addicts; almost every user starts when given drugs by a friend, sibling or acquaintance. There is a staggering disparity between the trivial sums earned by dealers who connect the cartels to the cartels' customers, and the huge sums trying to slow the flow of drugs to those street-level dealers. Kleiman, Caulkins and Hawken say that in developed nations, cocaine sells for about $3,000 per ounce — almost twice the price of gold. And the supply of cocaine, unlike that of gold, can be cheaply and quickly expanded. But in the countries where cocaine and heroin are produced, they sell for about 1 percent of their retail price in America. If cocaine were legalized, a $2,000 kilogram could be FedExed from Colombia for less than $50 and sold profitably in America for a small markup from its price in Colombia, and a $5 rock of crack might cost 25 cents. Criminalization drives the cost of the smuggled kilogram in America up to $20,000. But then it re-tails for more than $100,000.

People used to believe enforcement could raise prices but doubted that higher prices would decrease consumption. Now they know consumption declines as prices rise but wonder whether enforcement can substantially affect prices.

They urge rethinking the drug-control triad of enforcement, prevention and treatment because we have been much too optimistic about all three.

And cartels have oceans of money for corrupting enforcement because drugs are so cheap to produce and easy to renew. So it is not unreasonable to consider modifying a policy that gives hundreds of billions of dollars a year to violent organized crime.

Marijuana probably provides less than 25 percent of the cartels' revenues. Legalizing it would take perhaps $10 billion from some bad and violent people, but the cartels would still make much more money from cocaine, heroin and methamphetamines than they would lose from marijuana legalization.

Sixteen states and the District of Columbia have legalized "medical marijuana," a messy, mendacious semi-legalization that breeds cynicism regarding law. In 1990, 24 percent of Americans supported full legalization. Today, 50 percent do. In 2010, in California, where one-eighth of Americans live, 46 percent of voters supported legalization, and some opponents were marijuana growers who like the profits they make from prohibition of their product.

Would the public health problems resulting from legalization be a price worth paying for injuring the cartels and reducing the costs of enforcement? We probably are going to find out.

Learn the facts: Democracy depends on it

Dear editor,

I write to enlist your help by publishing relevant and unbiased facts to enable readers to understand and correctly assess the barrage of often false or misleading information regarding current issues, which pours daily from advertisements, politicized talk-show hosts and other poorly informed media sources.

An immediate and prime example is the current and real concern regarding the unusually steep increase in the price of gasoline. We are not being told that prices in the USA are tied to prices throughout the world. In fact, gasoline consumption in the USA has decreased and refiners are exporting gasoline and other refined petroleum products to other countries in order to maximize utilization of refinery capacity and maintain profit margins. Strategis Advisors reports that Ed Yardeni, a respected financial analyst, found that as of Feb. 14, 2012, speculators and traders held over 44 percent of total US oil inventories, hoping that geopolitical concerns, such as the Iranian confrontation, would cause oil prices to escalate. In 2008, when oil prices climbed to nearly $150 per barrel, speculators were later confirmed as playing a major role in the ballooning oil prices.

The healthcare law is a second issue where much misunderstanding abounds. From the get-go, the effort to rationalize healthcare in the USA was the focus of a multimillion-dollar lobbying and advertising campaign to defeat it and it is now a focus of misinformation for political purposes. Given the ideological makeup of the Supreme Court, the odds makers are offering favorable bets that the individual mandate will be struck down. This would not be an issue if the insurance industry had not succeeded in blocking the inclusion of a public option.

Given what appears to be a fairly even split of public opinion regarding the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, it is important there is an accurate understanding of what will be lost if the law is struck down. Without the law, insurance companies can keep turning away people with pre-existing conditions or charging them higher premiums. They can maintain annual caps and restore lifetime caps on how much they spend on an individual policyholder. They will be able to stop paying the full cost of preventive services. Young adults will no longer be guaranteed coverage on their parents' plan until age 26. Insurance companies will no longer be required to spend 80 cents of every premium dollar on medical claims. Before the law, insurance companies often spent 25-30 percent of the money which they collected on administration and profits. Administrative costs of Humana include CEO pay of $3.72 million plus stock options exercised of $10.38 million and for United Healthcare, CEO pay of $4.81 million and stock options exercised for $43.54 million (all for calendar year of 2010). Sucks up a lot of premium dollars!

There are other lesser well known aspects of the Healthcare Law, such as the charge to the FDA to facilitate the development of "biosimilars," cheaper versions of drugs produced from living organisms, such as vaccines, and gene therapies. These treatments are of growing importance and are often exceptionally expensive. Other aspects of the law are focused to decreasing the frequency and cost of hospital acquired infections and improving care after discharge, thus decreasing complication, pain and readmissions, hence driving costs down.

The law is not perfect, but I believe, as a work in progress, it merits the best efforts of people of all political persuasions to work to correct its defects. Should the law be struck down in its entirety, it may well be another generation before the political will to tackle the problem exists. Given the scientific tools available and the passionately interested and exceptionally bright minds working in the field, the technical complexity and capability of medical science will continue rapid progress. I believe that the vast majority of the American people are greatly concerned about the growing cost of medical care and equally so, because of its limited availability to so many individuals.

When I started practice some 60 years ago, the limited effectiveness of medical science constrained the negative impact of limited availability and cost was hardly a problem. I have been fortunate to witness and participate in the evolution of medical science, but with growing concern for those who cannot access proper care and those who are bankrupted by its cost. This must change.

One more thing, Rep. Ryan has proposed, among many other things, radically changing Medicare to provide seniors with fixed payment, which would represent a return of Medicare tax, to apply toward purchase of medical insurance on the open market. This proposal merits serious consideration if and only if tied to the provision of a public option.

Without this, the costs of medical insurance will rapidly become prohibitive. I have worked in the insurance industry as a medical director and I can assure you that the proposition that seniors will benefit from competition between the insurance companies is a fantasy.

The concept of democracy assumes that each individual, having availed himself or herself of the applicable facts, will make a rational decision based on understanding of the consequence. In this day of mega-funded opinion-molding efforts, driven by such master propagandists as Karl Rove and utilizing a drum-beat of words and images from print and electronic media, it is difficult for average citizens to dig out the facts and weigh them amidst the din. It is a great opportunity for the newspaper to isolate the relevant facts concerning the important issues and provide a valuable service by doing its best to separate the wheat from the chaff. Please help.

Sincerely,
Gene F. Conway, MD, FACC, CMD — Georgetown, Ohio

HOW THEY SEE IT

Lexington Herald-Leader on doctors help needed to fight pill abuse:

Kentucky's drug abuse problem is a huge public health problem.

Some drug dependency arises when people treat symptoms with pain killers in lieu of medical care they really need. There are also doctors who make a lot of money prescribing pain killers.

Compounding all this is a shortage of treatment for people trying to fight their dependency. There has been a 900 percent increase in people seeking treatment for substance addiction in Kentucky in the past decade.

Kentucky is one of the few states that doesn't offer substance-abuse treatment through Medicaid. That will change soon. The Legislature has approved Gov. Steve Beshear's proposal to add $11.6 million in Medicaid funding the first year of the biennial budget to treat about 4,500 people, increasing to $14.9 million and an additional 1,300 people the second year.

House Bill 4, aimed at giving law enforcement more tools to track doctors who prescribe painkillers inappropriately or illegally, has not fared so well. It would move the Kentucky All Scheduled Prescription Electronic Reporting system (KASPER) from health services to the office of the attorney general, create a user fee to fund it and give law enforcement more access to information about physicians who prescribe painkillers and patients who use them.

YESTERDAY'S ANSWER

BRIDGE

by Steve Becker

You are South, and the bidding has gone:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♣	Pass
2 ♦	Pass	2 ♣	Pass

What would you bid now with each of the following four hands?

- ♠ Q8 ♥ AK763 ♦ AQ952 ♣ 4
- ♠ 10 ♥ AJ854 ♦ KQ863 ♣ A8
- ♠ 974 ♥ KQJ82 ♦ AJ97 ♣ A
- ♠ J6 ♥ KJ985 ♦ AQJ10 ♣ AQ

high cards in diamonds, which would offer a very poor chance for game.

It would be unwise to make a final judgment at this point — either by passing or by leaping straightaway to four spades — without knowing the actual strength of partner's hand. As he is in a position to judge his values far better than you, raising him to three spades places the final decision exactly where it belongs.

2. Pass. The outlook here is not nearly as promising as in the previous case, and the best thing to do is to pass. Partner's bidding indicates that he wants to play the hand at a partscore in spades, and there is no reason for you to assume that hearts or diamonds would be better as trumps. In misfit hands, the bidding should be terminated as quickly as possible.

3. Four spades. Once partner rebids spades, game is extremely likely, and you should not risk his passing by now bidding only three spades. High-card point count should not overly influence how you gauge your prospects. The question is really more a matter of whether partner will lose four tricks with spades as trumps, and though this is possible, it is highly improbable.

4. Three notrump. The same sentiments apply here also. A rebid of only two notrump would be invitational, not forcing, and a sound game contract might easily be missed if partner elected to pass. Of course, he might not accept three notrump as the final resting place and might retreat to four spades, but that is far from an alarming prospect. If he does, your 18 high-card points and J-6 of spades will surely serve him well.

Tomorrow: A fatal discard.

HOROSCOPE

by Frances Drake

ARIES (March 21 to April 19)
From here on, your interest in improving your health definitely will deepen. You've decided that you want to pull your act together and feel more healthy as well. (Impressive.)

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20)
Don't be surprised if you become more actively involved in seeking out fun and pleasure, especially in the company of others. This applies to all social occasions, including playful times with children.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20)
You're ready to roll up your sleeves and tackle renovating projects or big improvements at home. This requires your patience with family members! (But you can do this.)

CANCER (June 21 to July 22)
You've become increasingly direct in all your communication with others. Have you noticed? (Because they have!) This will serve you well if you're in sales, marketing, teaching or acting.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22)
You are really spending your money now, and you can't seem to stop! Fortunately, you also have increasing energy to work hard to earn money. (Whew.)

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22)
Today Mars, which has been in your sign for so long, once again moves forward. That's why you feel like you, too, must move forward in all your projects. "Pull once more, my lads!"

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)
Behind-the-scenes research will start to reveal what you are looking for. It appears that your patience is finally paying off.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21)
Competition with a friend might increase now. If it's difficult hanging out with someone, why bother? Life is too short.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21)
Once again, your ambition is aroused like never before. This time, you intend to achieve something because you're focused and you've got a plan.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19)
Travel plans continue to appeal to you even though you've been traveling a lot lately! Once again, you'll be making plans to go somewhere very soon.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18)
Disputes about inheritances, taxes, debt and shared property might resume now. If so, you likely will get your way because you're strong! You have a healthy self-interest right now.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20)
Because difficulties with others have prevailed for this long, you're starting to understand how to deal with these situations. You're learning to live with them and not make a big deal about anything. It really is that simple.

YOU BORN TODAY
You're intellectually aggressive. You have modern ideas, and you're not afraid to express them. You have an excellent mind, and you like to explore concepts and philosophical ideas. You have your own ideas and aesthetic tastes, and never hesitate to explore them. In the year ahead, you should work hard to build or construct something important to you, because your rewards soon will follow.

The Maysville Utility Commission will start flushing fire hydrants Monday, April 16, 2012. The water may become cloudy in color during the procedure and residents are asked not to wash clothes while hydrants are being flushed in their area. They should also open the cold water faucet and let it run for a short time after flushing is completed. While flushing hydrants on some streets, residents on other streets may be affected, please be aware of this. The Maysville Utility Commission understands that this is an inconvenience to residents, however this has to be done for all our protection.
